

Paul Beverley interviewed by the New Zealand Herald

Paul Beverley

15 May 2017

Paul Beverley, National Chairman at Buddle Findlay, was interviewed by Anne Gibson from the New Zealand Herald on his avid love for music and Māori law. His colourful youth saw him touring New Zealand with his band performing soul, jazz and funk (a continued passion of his) before he found his niche in resource management and Māori/Treaty settlement law. Paul was recently appointed Buddle Findlay's National Chairman and has been on the Board since 2012.

"The Māori world is a rich, deep and complex one," says Beverley.
