

Buddle Findlay appoints three new partners

1 January 2016

National law firm Buddle Findlay has strengthened its team with the appointment of three new partners.

Based in Auckland, Miriam Andrews is a member of the banking and financial services team. Miriam has legal and commercial experience in portfolio sales and acquisitions, syndicated loans, property finance, agri-funding and acquisition finance. Nick Bragg specialises in corporate and commercial law with considerable experience across a broad range of mergers and acquisitions (including takeovers), capital markets and securities transactions, commercial contracts and corporate governance matters.

In Wellington Amy Ryburn specialises in technology, media and telecommunications (TMT), commercial contracting and procurement. Amy works with a range of clients from listed companies, large SOEs and government departments to startups, with a particular focus on large-scale ICT project work (from initial procurement phases through to contract drafting and negotiation).
